Common Features of Photoshop and Photoshop Elements In this article, we will explore the features and capabilities of Photoshop CC and how they compare to Photoshop Elements. Both the versions have similar features and capabilities. This is because they both are built on the same foundation. We will compare these features on both versions, so that you can decide which version is better for you: 1. Fast & Easy to Use Most of the features in both Photoshop and Photoshop Elements can be used quickly and easily. You can use most of the features to create awesome images or videos. However, Photoshop Elements, being an all-in-one product, is restricted to a few features only. Also, its interface is a bit more complex than Photoshop. Because of this, if you are a beginner in Photoshop, we recommend using Photoshop Elements for you to learn some of the basic functions. If you are comfortable using Photoshop Elements, and know some basic graphic design tools, then you can choose Photoshop CC for professional use. 2. Free Editing & Organizing Features Both Photoshop and Photoshop Elements have all editing and organizing tools to help you create awesome images. You can easily convert any type of image to different formats, such as JPG, PNG, GIF, and so on. Using the basic features, you can edit, crop, flip, rotate, add text, draw, and more. You can even add professional elements and design, such as eyes, hair, and so on. 3. Watermarks, Retouch & Crop Tools Both versions of Photoshop have some of the basic tools and features to watermark, remove unwanted objects, add a border, and even retouch certain areas of your image. These basic tools are similar, but Photoshop Elements doesn't have the same level of tools. However, the best thing about Photoshop Elements is that it has more basic tools than Photoshop. 4. What's New In?

Q: Setting up a batch job I have a series of hundreds of images and need to batch process them all by: a) give them all a unique text name b) resize them to 2500x2000 (note this is just for the example, theres a very large number of image so the exact pixels would not be important, but there will be limits on how close the width and height can be to each other). I have this working, using the command line and found a batch script that does most of what i want, however i need to get the new file name and thumbnail name as well. this is my current command line script: for %i in (.jpg) do set "thumbnail=%~-zi" set "tempname=c://Temp//%~-ti" set "imgname=c://Temp//%~-ni" echo "%thumbnail%" copy "%i" "%tempname%" echo "!thumbnail!" echo "%i" echo "%i" >> "%imgname%" what i need to be able to do is: set "thumbnail=%~-zi" //gets the jpgs created set "thumbnail=%~-zi%%~-xn" //gets the jpgs created, but has another unique name. if anyone can assist with this please do, i just need the script to be updated a little and then it will work, i just dont know how to get that into the script. I have tried playing about with this with no luck. A: Ok so my script has been updated and works well, if anyone is interested i can post the script when completed. i just realised you can change the part after the last set so that you can also change what name the file is called. for %i in (.jpg) do set "thumbnail=%~-zi" set "tempname=c://Temp//%~-ti" set "imgname=c://Temp//%~-ni" set "extname=%thumbnail:~1,-6%" echo "%thumbnail% copy "%i" "%tempname%" echo %tempname% setlocal EnableDelayedExpansion set "thumbnail=" for %i
